

ABSTRACT

A system for creating a variation of an audio track from audio building blocks is presented, where track variation may be created during a live performance. Two or more of the presented systems may be coupled to automatically maintain a beat mix between two or more playing audio track building blocks. Audio building blocks are prepared in advance to include features that may enable the creation of the track variation and the automatic maintaining of the beat mix.